This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

AT a time when the minds of landowners, lawyers, and reformers, both theoretical and practical, are exercised on the subject of Land Transfer; when some enthusiasts argue in support of a system of registration of title, and other persons equally enthusiastic contend for a registration of assurances, and yet a third set of persons content themselves with saying "Let well alone;" it may not be considered inopportune for the Council of the Yorkshire Archæological and Topographical Association to have selected for the second volume of the Record Series the first of a series of three volumes of Yorkshire Fines of the Tudor period. This decision of the Council may be thought none the less appropriate from the fact that Yorkshire is one of the two English counties which at the present time have a Registry of Assurances dating back to the reign of Queen Anne, and that in the case of Yorkshire a new Registry Act has recently been passed admittedly as an experiment, and with some idea of adopting a similar system for the whole of England. Now, whatever may be the advantages or disadvantages of a Register of Assurances in relation to a cheap and expeditious mode of Land Transfer, there is no doubt whatever that such a Register affords a fine field for the genealogist and local historian, and it is to be hoped that the Yorkshire Registers will receive attention in future volumes of the Record Series. But to return to the subject of the present volume, the collection of fines now in the Public Record Office, and extending from the time of Henry II. to the year 1834, is a splendid example of a system of registration of assurances. It dates from a period when the only other common mode of transferring freehold lands was by charter of feoffment, which did not possess the great advantage which a fine had of being a matter of record, and therefore always available as evidence when a feoffment might be lost or destroyed. Fines therefore were very generally used in former days as a means of transferring property, and from the many details which they give, both of genealogy and topography, and from the long period which they cover, they may be well said to be among the most valuable of all the public records.

Fines were abolished by the Statute 3 and 4, Will. IV., c. 74, from the 31st December, 1833, and more simple modes of assurance were substituted. They are therefore now not often met with in the investigation of the titles of freehold estates, and the study of this branch of the law of real property is gradually being abandoned to students of family history and topography. As the origin and nature of fines may possibly be comparatively unknown to some members of the Association, and as other members may be glad to have an opportunity of refreshing their memories on the subject, it has been thought desirable to preface this volume with a short account of the origin and nature of fines, chiefly taken from the valuable treatise on the subject in Cruise's "Digest of the Laws of England," to which those are referred who wish for further information than is here given. A fine then is understood by conveyancers to be a means of transferring property through the agency of an action or suit at law and it is defined by Cruise to be "an amicable agreement or composition of a suit, whether real or fictitious, between the demandant and tenant, with the consent of the judges, and enrolled among the records of the court where the suit is commenced, by which lands and tenements are transferred from one person to another; or any other settlement is made respecting them."

To effect this purpose of transfer the following plan was adopted: a suit was commenced concerning the lands intended to be conveyed, and when the writ was sued out, and the parties appeared in court, a composition of the suit was entered into, with the consent of the judges, whereby the lands in question were declared to be the right of one of the contending parties, and this agreement was enrolled among the records of the court.

Cruise says that it has been a favourite topic with our lawyers, to enlarge on the antiquity of fines. Some have insisted that they were coeval with the first rudiments of the common law. Others have contended that fines were well known in this kingdom before the Norman Conquest. There can, however, scarce remain a doubt but that fines were first introduced into England during the reign of King Stephen, or that of his immediate successor, King Henry II., and that we are indebted to Justinian's Code for this assurance.

A fine consisted of five parts. I. The original writ. II. The licentia concordandi. III. The concord. IV. The note. V. The foot, chirograph, or indenture.

When the parties had agreed to levy a fine, the person to whom the land was to be conveyed commenced a suit at law against the owner or tenant (who was also called the deforciant, as keeping the plaintiff out of possession) by suing out a writ of covenant against him, the foundation of which was a supposed agreement or covenant, that the tenant should convey the land to the plaintiff or demandant, on the breach of which the suit was brought.

In suing out the writ there was a fine due to the king, called the primer fine, the reason of which it is not necessary to explain.

The second part of a fine was the licentia concordandi; for as soon as the suit was commenced, the owner or deforciant, knowing himself to be in the wrong, was supposed to make overtures of accommodation to the demandant or plaintiff, who accepted them, but having given pledges to prosecute his suit, applied to the court, upon the return of the writ of covenant, for leave to make the matter up, which was readily granted, on payment of another fine.

This second fine was called the King's Silver, and sometimes the post fine, and was paid on obtaining the licentia concordandi. It was entered on the writ of covenant, and such entry ought to contain: I. The sum given for licence to compound. II. The party who pays it. III. The plea and between whom. IV. The land for which the fine is paid.

The third part of a fine was the concord or agreement entered into openly in the Court of Common Pleas, or before the Chief Justice of that court, or commissioners duly authorised for the purpose; which was the substance of the fine.[a] It was usually an acknowledgment from the deforciants, or those who kept the others out of possession, that the lands in question were the right of the demandants, otherwise called the plaintiffs, and from the acknowledgment or recognition of right thus made, the party who levied the fine was called the cognizor, and the person to whom it was levied, the cognizee.

The form of the concord was thus: "And the agreement is such, to wit, that the aforesaid A. (the deforciant in the original writ) hath acknowledged the aforesaid manors, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, with the appurtenances, to be the right of him the said B. (the plaintiff or demandant) and those he hath remised and quit claimed from him the said A. and his heirs to the aforesaid B. and his heirs for ever; and moreover the said A. hath granted, for himself and his heirs, that he will warrant to the aforesaid B. and his heirs, the aforesaid manor, &c., against him the said A. and his heirs for ever."

Suitors in the curia regis were at all times allowed to prosecute their causes by attorney, who was called responsalis ad lucrandum vel perdendum. Consequently, until the Statute de modo levandi fines, 18 Ed. I., Stat. 4, which put a stop to the practice, fines were frequently levied by attorney, and in the Formulare Anglicanum there are several records of fines, which appear to have been levied by attorney, the chirograph being worded in this manner:—Hæc est finalis concordia facta, &c., inter Thomam de Preston, per Alexandrum Wallensem, positum loco suo ad lucrandum vel perdendum, et Ranulphum, &c.

Originally those persons who were desirous of levying fines acknowledged the concord in person in open court, and this practice was enjoined by the Statute de modo levandi fines above referred to; and until the abolition of fines persons occasionally appeared personally at the bar of the court and acknowledged in the same manner. In course of time, however, owing to the great inconvenience of compelling persons to travel from remote parts of the kingdom to Westminster for the purpose of acknowledgment, provision was made for the issue, in cases of need, of a Commission out of the Court of Chancery, called a writ of dedimus potestatem, directed to a certain number of Commissioners reciting the writ of covenant and authorising the Commissioners to take the acknowledgment of the parties, and directing them to certify the same, under their hands and seals. to the Court of Common Pleas. The judges of assize might, in their circuits, take the acknowledgment of fines, without any writ of dedimus potestatem, on account of the great confidence placed in their judgment and integrity.

[a] For the courts in which fines could be levied, and as to the Courts of the Counties Palatine of Lancaster, Chester, and Durham, the Isle of Ely, &c., &c., see Cruise's "Digest," Vol. V., chap. 4. It must be borne in mind that part of Yorkshire was under the jurisdiction of the Bishopric of Durham. As to the Durham Palatine Records, see Thomas's "Handbook to the Public Records," p. 334.

The fourth part of a fine was the note, which was an abstract of the writ of covenant and concord, and was only a docquet taken by the chirographer, from which he drew up the indenture.

The fifth and last part of a fine was the foot, chirograph, or indenture, which included the whole matter, stating the parties, day, year, and place, and before whom it was acknowledged or levied. Of this there were indentures made and ingrossed at the chirographer's office, and delivered to the cognizor and cognizee, beginning with these words, "This is the final agreement," &c., and then stating the whole proceeding at length, thus the fine was completely levied.

In order to give persons, whose claims would otherwise be barred by a fine, an opportunity of asserting those claims, it was provided by various statutes, that fines which were to be valid against such persons should be read and proclaimed in open court a certain number of times, and the proclamations were endorsed on the foot of the fine and considered matters of record. As every fine was not proclaimed, it being in the election of the person levying the fine to have it proclaimed or not, fines are distinguished into fines at common law and fines with proclamations.

Fines are again divided into four sorts, the first of which is called a fine sur cognizance de droit come ceo qu' il a de son done. This was the best and surest kind of fine; for the deforciant acknowledged in court a former feoffment or gift in possession to have been made by him to the plaintiff, so that it was rather an acknowledgment of a former conveyance, than a conveyance originally made; for the deforciant acknowledged (cognoscit) the right to be in the plaintiff or cognizee, as that which he had de son done, of the proper gift of himself the cognizor. The form of this fine was—"And the agreement is such, to wit, that the aforesaid A. hath acknowledged the aforesaid manor, &c., to be the right of him, the said B., as that which the said B. hath of the gift of the aforesaid A.; and that he hath remised and quit claimed from him the said A. and his heirs, to the aforesaid B. and his heirs for ever."

The second sort of fine was called a fine sur cognizance de droit tantum, or upon acknowledgment of the right only, without the circumstance of a preceding gift by the cognizor. This species of fine was generally used to pass a reversionary interest, or it might be used by a tenant for life, to surrender his life estate to the person in remainder.

The form of this fine was—"And the agreement is such, to wit, that the aforesaid A. hath acknowledged the aforesaid tenements, &c., to be the right of the said B.; and he hath granted for himself and his heirs, that the aforesaid tenements which W. R. and M. his wife hold for the term of the life of G. of the inheritance of the said A. on the day on which this agreement was made, and which after the decease of him the said G., ought to revert to the said A. and his heirs, shall, after the decease of the said G., entirely remain to the said B. and his heirs for ever."

The third sort of fine was called a fine sur concessit; where the cognizor, in order to make an end of all disputes, though he acknowledged no precedent right or gift, granted to the cognizee an estate de novo, by way of supposed composition; which might be either an estate in fee, in tail, for life, or for years.

The form of this fine is—"And the agreement is such, to wit, that the aforesaid A. hath granted to the aforesaid B. the aforesaid tenements, &c., to hold for 61 years."

The fourth sort of fine was called a fine sur done, grant, and render, which is a double fine, comprehending the fine sur cognizance de droit come ceo, &c., and the fine sur concessit. It was used to create particular limitations of estates; and the cognizee, after the right was acknowledged in him, rendered or granted back to the cognizor some other estate in the lands.

The form of this fine is—"And the agreement is such, to wit, that the aforesaid A. hath acknowledged the aforesaid tenements to be the right of him the said B. as those which the said B. hath of the gift of the aforesaid A. And those he hath remised and quit claimed from himself the said A. and his heirs for ever (warranty from the cognizor); and for this acknowledgment, remise, quit claim, warranty, fine, and agreement, the said B. hath granted to the said A. the aforesaid tenements, &c. And this he hath rendered to him in the same court, to hold the said tenements to the said A. and the heirs of his body."

It seems unnecessary to state here what persons were capable and who were incapable of levying a fine, except that in general, all persons of full age and of sufficient understanding, might levy fines of those lands in which they had any estate or freehold, either by right or by wrong. A fine might be levied of every species of real property.—Cruise's "Digest," Vol. V., chapters 5 and 6.

It only now remains to be said that the Council are indebted to Francis Collins, M.D., for the transcript of the Tudor Fines, and also for the editing and index. All names, both of persons and places, are given verbatim et literatim. It has been thought much better to adopt this course, than to attempt any so called corrections or even suggestions, which at best could only be partial and doubtful.

EDITOR'S INTRODUCTION.

To the Topographer and Genealogist the search amongst the bundles of Feet of Fines is a lengthy and often a disappointing task, owing, in a measure, to the little information given in the Official Index at the Public Record Office. It is the experience of the writer that the Index has been carefully compiled, and contains but very few errors; we seldom, however, find more names mentioned than those of the plaintiff and deforciant who stand first in the cause, and but little information is given regarding the nature and situation of the property.

The object of this work is to place in the hands of those interested in the topography and genealogy of Yorkshire a complete index of the names of all places and persons in the Feet of Fines, for that county, during the period over which it extends, together with such information as will enable them to see at a glance how far it may be desirable to consult the original documents.

The compiler would impress upon the searcher that the work is intended to be used simply as an index or work of reference, and not as an abstract, though it approaches more nearly to the latter than to the former. He would also beg of him to be lenient as regards errors, to which a work of this nature is peculiarly liable. Allowance, he hopes, will be made for his own clerical errors, for those in the original documents and for the difficulties he was often placed in with regard to the faithful rendering of many names, owing to the peculiarities of the old court hand; in which it is almost needless here to say, the letters "i," "m," "n," and "u" are represented by so many strokes or minims, the latter letter also, as frequently as not, taking the place of "v;" making it impossible to avoid mistakes, even with a fair topographical knowledge and a tolerably extensive acquaintance with the names of the county families of that period; and also having at hand the ever ready assistance of the officials of the Public Record Office and other experts working there, to all of whom he is under deep obligations, and desires here to thank.

He has only further to say that the Feet of Fines are generally in good condition. Here and there a bundle is missing, and in such cases he obtained his information from the Notes of Fines, and when these were not available, as happened for two or three terms, he made use of the De Banco Rolls, in which, however, the information is not so fully given, and occasionally some of the Fines are difficult or impossible to find, owing to omission or to entry on the Roll of some other term; at any rate, some few, a diligent and tedious search failed to bring to light. He trusts that when completed his work will be the means of assisting many in their topographical and genealogical pursuits, and of, perhaps, saving others many hours of what might otherwise have proved useless and unprofitable search.

THE FOLLOWING DESCRIPTION OF THE RECORDS OF FINES IS GIVEN IN THE SECOND REPORT OF THE DEPUTY KEEPER OF THE PUBLIC RECORDS.—APPENDIX I., PAGE 33.

NO. 23. DESCRIPTION OF THE RECORDS OF FINES.

1st. The foundation of the Fine is the Writ of Covenant on which is indorsed the King's Silver, &c.

2nd. It is followed by the Concord, signed by the parties, and either acknowledged in open Court, or before Commissioners. In the latter case there are annexed to it the—

3rd. Dedimus Potestatem, containing the names of Commissioners for taking the Fine, and the—

4th. Affidavit to verify the taking of the acknowledgments, &c.

5th. Note of the Fine.

The Note of the Fine is made out by the Chirographer from the Concord, and from which and the other proceedings he draws up the—

6th. Foot of the Fine.

The Foot and previous proceedings annexed, the Chirographer deposits with the Custos Brevium.

The Chirographer retains the Notes in his own possession, and files them in bundles, of each term; putting on a separate piece of parchment the proclamations which he annexes to each bundle: and the Note of the Fine, with the proclamations, has always been given out for evidence.

7th. Foot and Indentures of Fine.

Then on a separate piece of parchment, follows the Foot of the Fine, and the two Indentures are engrossed, which, together with the above processes annexed, are sent to the Custos Brevium Office. The parchment is divided into three, the Foot is retained, and the Indentures given out to the parties.

Foot of the Fine, viz.: This is the Final Agreement, &c. (containing the whole Fine with proclamations indorsed).	CHIROGRAPH	Indenture of Fine. This is the Final Agreement.
		Indenture of Fine. This is the Final Agreement.

If the parties, parcels, and date of the Fine only were required, they were obtained from the books kept at the King's Silver Office; but these Records are now partially destroyed and damaged by fire.

It was the practice to enter the whole proceedings from the Writ to the Foot in the Fine Roll of the Common Pleas, which must not be confounded with the Chancery Fine Roll: but these entries, being irregularly and not uniformly made, cannot be relied upon.

N.B.—The wavy lines in the example of Fines in the above description show the mode in which the several parts were separated and indented.—Ed.
